

Problem Statement:

Sorting through a large volume of emails from classes, administration, and other opportunities can be time-consuming and inefficient. Important emails are often buried under the influx of new messages, making it difficult to quickly locate specific information when needed. This creates challenges in staying organized and responding to critical communications in a timely manner.